

Medical Insurance

Overview

This document summarizes the group medical insurance benefit provided to eligible employees and, where applicable, their dependents. The policy is intended to provide financial protection against hospitalization and related medical expenses.

Eligibility

Full-time employees typically become eligible for coverage from their date of joining or after completion of a short probationary period, depending on company policy. Dependents such as a spouse, children, and in some cases parents may be added to the policy during the enrollment window or upon a qualifying life event.

Coverage Details

- Hospitalization expenses including room rent, nursing charges, and doctor's fees.
- Pre- and post-hospitalization expenses within a defined number of days before and after admission.
- Day-care procedures that do not require a 24-hour hospital stay.
- Ambulance charges up to a specified limit.
- Maternity benefits, where included, subject to a waiting period.

Exclusions

Certain conditions and treatments are typically excluded or subject to a waiting period, including pre-existing conditions during an initial waiting period, cosmetic procedures not related to an accident, and self-inflicted injuries. Employees should refer to the detailed policy wording issued by the insurer for a complete list of exclusions.

Cashless and Reimbursement Claims

Employees can typically avail cashless treatment at network hospitals by presenting their insurance card and obtaining pre-authorization from the insurer's third-party administrator. For treatment at non-network hospitals, employees generally pay upfront and submit a reimbursement claim along with original bills and discharge summaries within the timeline specified by the insurer.

Sum Insured and Premium

The sum insured represents the maximum amount payable by the insurer in a policy year, and is usually provided to employees at no direct cost, with the option to purchase additional voluntary top-up coverage or add dependents at an additional premium, often deducted from salary.

How to Raise a Query or Claim

Employees can typically raise questions about coverage, claims status, or card issuance through the HR benefits team or the insurer's dedicated helpline, and should retain copies of all medical bills and reports until a claim is fully settled.